The main character in this story is a jellyfish known as Rhizostoma pulmo. Our cameras followed it during its apparently casual wanderings along the Mediterranean coast. We also filmed its surprising reproductive cycle, from the moment when a tiny polyp founds a new colony of thousands of individuals, until the time when, majestic and elegant, the adult sails through the water like a suspended spaceship. During our journey, the jellyfish has an unusual encounter with some crabs of the Portunus genus. They lie in wait for an then suddenly attack the jellyfish in nimble leaps. The quickest - and luckiest - crab installs itself under the umbrella of the jellyfish and uses it as a means of transport to new territories it seeks to conquer.
